THE LAST DEMOCRATIC TRIUMPH.

[From the Boston Journal.]

The Democracy have done it now! They have swung round the circle in choosing their United States Senators, till they have returned to one of their first loves by electing Andrew Johnson. Was ever a more pointed contrast of two parties presented at about the same hour of the same day than in this choice of Johnson and Gen. Burnside? It discloses, however, only one instance of the peculiar manner in which the Democratic party of to-day betrays itself through its favorites through recent tragic changes. In Connecticut it is probably the perfection of loyalty, still it has a U. S. Senator to elect, when Eaton, the most rabid opponent of the Union cause during the war, is given the place of honor. In Pennsylvania it is a mere wire-puller that succeeds, in Indiana a cold-blooded politician, in Missouri an old rebel soldier; why, then, should not the Democracy of Tennessee, who were said to have a very respectable representative in their Governor, pass over him and all their other men, in order to resuscitate Andrew Johnson and instil life into the country again?

He is the only man that ever disgraced the Presidency of the United States by personal and public misconduct, and he did what he could to embolden, aid and discourage the whole country. It is folly to say that at his time of life, with his temper and narrowness of ideas, he has learned any wisdom or, on the contrary, his main ambition to get into the Senate seems to be to give vent to his old prejudices and to fight over his old battles, so far as he can drag them up again. There is not a disinterested man in the country, though a Democrat, who can be found to say that he sees the least prospect of benefit to any interest or section by the seating of Andrew John on to the United States Senate. And yet this is just the Democratic party has done. The only consolation is that it act more than confirms all that party's strongest opponents have charged as to its ruling tendencies and spirit, and that it has accomplished a great blunder with its eyes wide open.

The joint resolution fixing the term of the President and Vice-President at six years, which was reported favorably by the House Judiciary Committee yesterday, gets rather a roughish reception in the House. The amendment fixed the term for President and Vice-President at six years, while the President is eligible for re-election, and Vice-President ineligible to the office of President, when the office has devolved upon him during the term of Vice-President. Judge Hoar took strong ground against the resolution, urging that there was no popular demand for the amendment. Gen Butler favored the measure. On the final vote it was defeated Ayes, 141; nays, 104, falling of the requisite two-thirds.

The Rumber Journal says "A large number of petitions asking for the re-establishment of the reminiatory act, were received and read yesterday, and referred to the committee of ways and means of the lodge of Good Templars in the state, backed up by the Grand Lodge. But no mailing can be gained this winter by launching these petitions upon the Legislature, it is understood, that they will be withdrawn. Should they be presented, however, an equal number of remonstrances are hard upon their heels."

Considering all things, and viewed purely as a question of taste, the "average rhadi" will be inclined to think that the Portland Press might with propriety have omitted from its quotation of notices the following: Endorsement of a Democratic journal, viz: [the Press] is very bitter on all political rings, notably the "Handle" by which it faced unpeelfully during its senatorial journey. The Impression quite prevailed throughout the State at the time of the present month that the "swing round" process was not just as stated above, and in copying the lampoon itself our contemporary has evidently indulged in a little sarcasm at its own expense.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL COMMISSION. On Tuesday the Constitutional Commission was engaged for the most part on the question of apportioning Representatives to the Legislature. The question was fully discussed and considered from every point of view.

The first question came up on the number which should compose the House. After discussion it was voted 7 to 3 to retain the present number, 151.

The next question considered was in relation to retaining the present system of county lines, such as the result an order was adopted, 5 to 5 to the effect that "representatives shall be apportioned to counties, as now provided in the Constitution."

The next topic considered was the distribution of Representatives within county lines, and the discussion turned to some extent upon the inequality of representation between cities and a certain class of towns. As embodying the sense of the Commission on this point, the following resolve was adopted by a vote of 8 to 2

Resolved, That that part of section 3, article 4, of the Constitution which provides for a ratio of 1,500 and an increasing ratio and limiting the number of Representatives to seven ought to be changed

A further step in this direction, the following resolve was passed, by a vote of 9 to 1

Resolved, That the counties be divided into single representative districts, so far as it can be done without dividing towns or any ward of a city.

The above resolves, with several other papers referring to the Legislature, were referred to a committee composed of Messrs. Talbot, Gilbert and Haines, to draft a constitutional provision in accordance therewith.

Second—That existing charters or grants under which the organization has been made or business done, shall be subject to the same provision.

Third—That the exercise of eminent domain shall never be construed to prevent the Legislature from taking the property and franchises of incorporated companies and subjecting them to public use.

Fourth—No corporation existing at the time of the adoption of this article shall have the benefit of any future legislation, except on condition of the acceptance of the provisions of the Constitution.

Fifth—The power to tax corporations and corporate property shall not be surrendered or suspended by any contract or grant to which the State shall be a party.

Sixth—A declaration that all railroads, canals, etc., are common carriers; also that railroads shall connect, and transport each others' passengers, etc., without discrimination. [illegible]

A resolve looking to the conferring of conditional power of pardon upon the Governor, was referred to Messrs. Gilbert, Robins and Madigan for draft.

A resolve looking to the abolition of the Executive Council was under discussion when the Commission adjourned at 5.45.

The Secretary of the Treasury has notified the Attorney-General that the Central Branch of the Union Pacific, the Sioux City and Pacific, and the Central Pacific Railroad Companies have failed to comply with the demands made by the Treasury Department of 5 per cent. on their net earnings after the sixty days' notice to them. Accordingly the Attorney-General has commenced preparations for bringing suits against these companies, but has not yet decided upon the places at which the proceedings shall be commenced.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL

It will be imperiinentary for Senators to allude to Senator Cockerell as "the rooster from Missouri"

David W. Campbell, Esq., of Cherryfield, died Saturday evening, after a sickness of only about one week. The best medical aid was obtained from Bangor and other localities, but the disease, (diabetes) was unyielding. Mr. Campbell was about 71 years old. He was a member of the firm of A. Campbell & Co.

The Brooklyn Eagle, Democratic, has the magnanimity to say that it esteems "the continuance of Mr Dawes to the public service as an important event to the well-being of the country and to the better administration of its government, whether at the hands of the Republicans or the Democrats."

Not very pleasant was Postmaster-General Jewell's dispatch to the New port postmaster the other day, in reply to a telegram saying his office was burned, but it had a kind of New England common-sense air about it "All right. Do the best you can and try not to spend too much money! but do not let the mails be delayed anywhere."

Boston Papers think the White Leaguers in danger of spoiling the game by showing their hands too quick. Perhaps they should mask their spirit and designs until we have full control of the Government, when they may bring out their war claims, present the full records of their Democratic friends in the country, though a Democrat, who can be found to say that he sees the least prospect of benefit to any interest or section by the seating of Andrew John on to the United States Senate. And yet this is just the Democratic party has done. The only consolation is that that act more than confirms all that party's strongest opponents have charged as to its ruling tendencies and spirit, and that it has accomplished a great blunder with its eyes wide open.

"DOUBTLESS THE

Best Cough Medicine

IN THE WORLD"

is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. Sold everywhere.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.

Dear Sir: I have been using your Balsam of Wild Cherry in my family for years, and have found it to be doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.

Yours, etc., A. H. ALLEN & CO.

Dealers supplied at Wholesale by the Proprietors, SEth W. FOWLE & SONS, Boston.

Sold by all Druggists everywhere.

Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.

I should like to tell you what I know about it. It has cured my wife of a cough that troubled her for years. I know of many others who have used it with the same result.

EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have sold it constantly. In all cases of coughs it gives relief, and in most cases it effects a cure. H. H. [illegible]

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

It has not failed in a case contained in one vial to give the desired relief, and I will buy the article regardless of another chance.

LIFE WAS SAVED

By it. I had consumed, but thought there was a case of Consumption of the Lungs, and although, after taking many skillful physicians, she continued to fail constantly, so that she despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor recommended her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was gratifying, I need not add.

RELIEF WAS INSTANTANEOUS

and recovery rapid. She has now been for years in full health and vigor. Wherever she goes she is asked, with tears, "Where is that blessed medicine?" to which she always replies in a clear, ringing voice, "Ask for Wistar's Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam and take no other."

IRRITATION

and a cough so severe that it would keep a child awake nights, yield immediately to the use of this Balsam, which, in the opinion of many, is a most valuable medicine.

BELIEVE AT THE REMEDY

Is compounded for healing, for in all cases and wherever it has been used it has proved to be a most valuable remedy. Since the Balsam came to my notice I have never been without it. I have recommended it to my friends, and have sold a bottle of your Balsam, and I can find no one dissatisfied to change it for any other. The continued taking it for fifty years, etc.

EXTREME PAIN

in the lungs, now which, not to speak of it, is entirely to the use of VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM. Very truly yours,

JOHN CAPEN.

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, with the medicine, 25 cts. per dose. Small bottle, 50 cts. per dose.

SUFFERERS,

DON'T FAIL TO TRY

Adamson's BOTANIC BALSAM!

Only 25 Cents. An enfailing Remedy for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Asthma, Bronchitis, Influenza, Soreness of the Throat, Chest and Lungs, and all diseases leading to Consumption.

$5000 for an Incurable Case.

[From a Distinguished Lawyer of Boston.]

MR. FRANK HIGGIN, Dear Sir—I desire to say a word in behalf of your Adamson's Cough Balsam. I have long been a sufferer from a very severe cough from the first of last November, trying a great many preparations without any considerable or permanent improvement, until the middle of March, when a friend brought me a bottle of your medicine. I tried the small sample bottle which Mr. Goodwin gave me, and I had no occasion to try anyone, for within twelve hours from taking the first dose, the cough entirely left me. The results were so decisive in my case that I feel it my duty to do more than a score of sufferers. Mr. Goodwin, No. 38 Hanover street, sells for 25 cents, and so far as I care, in every instance with marked success.

Respectfully yours, CHAS. C. SUTTER, Firm Sutter & Wyman, Attorneys and Counselors at Law, 24 Tremont Row.

[From Alonzo G. Wood, publisher of Zion's Herald, Aid, 36 Bromfield St., Boston.]

Several bottles of Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam have been used in my family with the most gratifying results. We esteem it as one of the best of medicines.

$5000 GOLD!

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Beware of Counterfeits and Imitations.

The high reputation gained by ADAMSON'S BOTANIC COUGH BALSAM for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Influenza, Lungs and Consumption, has given rise to spurious imitations. The genuine ADAMSON'S BOTANIC COUGH BALSAM is prepared only by FRANK W. KINSMAN, Sole Proprietor. As proof, I respectfully refer to the signatures of Chas. C. Sutter, Esq., of Boston, and Mr. W. Kinsman, Druggist, Augusta, Maine, now known in the glass of the bottle. $5000 for a better article.

DONT FAIL TO TRY IT.

The following are a few of the names of those who have used the Balsam: Gov. Coburn, Gen. Chamberlain, Mrs. Hon. James W. Hartshorn, Amos N. Merrill, ex-Governor of Maine, Mrs. Hon. Hannibal Hamlin, Col. Thomas Long, Hon. J. J. Hamblin, Mayor Bangor, Hon. Geo. Evans, Rev. Edwin Martin, Rev. C. V. Penney, Rev. Wm. A. Drew, Hon. H. P. Wood, Col. E. L. FROM THE STATE CAPITAL.

Wednesday's Proceedings in the Legislature—More About the Agricultural Report—The School Laws—Hearing on the Bangor Water Projects—Coming Bills Etc

[SPECIAL TO THE WHIG AND COURIER]

AUGUSTA, Jan. 27. To-day has been a busy one for the lawmakers. A large amount of business was performed in spite of the expiration of the time for the presentation of private matters for legislation. As a rule there was no unnecessary delay of such matters dumped into the Legislature.

The order for the protection of owners of sheep bonds was taken from the Senate and assigned for to-morrow. The bill relating to the locating of railroads was also called in the House and pending it joint rules. A number of petitions asking for appropriations of money for schools, roads &c. in Washington and Perham plantations, were tabled in the House. The House ordered to be printed the bill for the prevention of fraud occasioned by low unprincipled fellows who play their little games on farmers by selling them agricultural land warrants and taking their notes, and then letting them whistle for what they have bought. Very to the law was reported to the petitioners who live in Auburn and Lewiston.

Charters Reported

Acts of incorporation were reported for the Maine State Pure-Blood Jersey Cattle Company of Winthrop, Bangor and Howard Street and Company with a capital of $100,000.

Matters for Legislation

Legislation was asked to increase the capital stock of the Dirigo Slate Company $120,000, and to give authority to the company to construct a tramway, to extend the office of the Farmington and Carrabassett Railroad Company to Freeport, passing through the towns of Filsworth, Franklin, Cherryfield and other intermediate towns, to change the time for taking land in the towns of the Androscoggin to compel foreign insurance companies doing business in this State to take out a license to do so, to incorporate the Lewiston Mutual Insurance Company, to extend for five years the charter of the North Bank of Rockland, to incorporate the North Windham Manufacturing Company with capital of $70,000, Monson Pearl Slate Company with a capital of $250,000, the charter for an hotel in the village of Long Wharf Lane, A. W. Wood and James Foss to incorporate the Grand Harmon Hampden and North Newburgh Cheese Factory with capital of $8,000, to establish a land in Lincoln Village.

Orders of inquiry were presented asking for legislation for the better protection of life on railroad trains, to repeal the Sheriff act, and if there is improper fees to so much of the law that fees and costs are less burdensome and oppressive to poor people in the weight of grain to Lydia the duties of the Selectmen of the town of Lyndon in 1874.

Printing of School Laws

An order of inquiry was referred relating to printing the statutes and school laws to include the laws of this Legislature, and to send copies to every school district.

The Homestead Act

An order of inquiry was referred relating to exempting the statutes so as to give the wife of a person possessed of the own right the actual benefit of the exemption in the homestead law.

Free High School Law

An order of inquiry was referred relating to enabling towns to place in their high schools that do not and cannot employ a teacher of the proper qualifications, and to allow towns to pay for the education of such scholars out of the school fund, and to allow towns to pay for the education of such scholars out of the school fund, and to allow towns to pay for the education of such scholars out of the school fund.

A bill was reported incorporating the town of Medway.

An appropriation of $10,000 is asked for the Maine General Hospital.

Registration of Bonds.

Several petitions have been presented asking that the Legislature memorialize Congress to repeal a law providing that all bonds, notes and securities shall be registered as other property or be uncollectable.

The State Treasurer

Mr Hatch has accepted the office of State Treasurer, and his official bond was received to-day with his acceptance and referred to the Committee on Financial Affairs.

Inspection of Fish.

A bill was reported providing for the appointment of inspectors of fish, to hold office for five years in those places where pickled fish are cured, to require annual returns to be made of all fish inspected to the Secretary of State's office.

A Bangor Claim

Frank Strange of Bangor petitions for compensation for wood used for the State master at that city by the troops which he furnished and which has not been paid for.

Penobscot Pilotage

A petition was presented asking for the establishment and regulation of pilotage in and out of the Penobscot bay and river. Also to authorize Richard Wallow and Henry Parker to act as pilots.

Finally Passed

The following have finally passed both branches:

An act to make valid the assessment of taxes in the town of Verona for the year 1871, and authorizing A. Martin & Sons to build and maintain a wharf in the waters of Belfast harbor, an act authorizing Joseph Churchill et al to extend a wharf into the waters in the town of Brewer, an act to incorporate the Penobscot Chess Company, an act authorizing the Cumberland Bone Co to build a wharf into the waters in the town of Boothbay, an act to incorporate the St. Omar Commandery Knights Templar of Waterville, an act to authorize the County Commissioners of Knox to place monuments.

The Governor and the Farmers

The remonstrance against decreasing the size of the agricultural report all said to be written in the report of a special committee in the report of a special committee in the report of a special committee.

Bay & River Railroad

At the hearing of the Railroad Committee this afternoon a hearing was given on the bill for extending the time of building the Penobscot Bay and River Railroad. Mayor Brook of Belfast and a committee of the City Government appeared, who took the ground that while the people of Belfast were strongly in favor of building the road they objected to the building of the bridge of the company across the harbor at the mouth of the Penobscot river, as it would cause an ice blockade and greatly depreciate the value of wharf property. The preliminary survey of the road was satisfactory, they said. What they wanted was that the bridge should cross above the lower bridge so as not to interfere with the navigation. If the bridge was built the railroad company proposed to build an elevated engineering difficulty.

A. G. Hewett, Esq., appeared for the bridge company. He argued for the building of the bridge at the place proposed and referred to the opinions of engineers in favor of the bridge. The hearing was continued one week.

The Bangor Water Projects

The Committee on Interior Waters gave a lengthy hearing this afternoon and evening on the bill to store the water for the completion of the works of the Bangor Water Company. Hon. Lewis Barker appeared for the Company and Hon. Wm. H. McCrillis appeared in opposition. There were quite a number of parties from Bangor present, who listened to the arguments made with much interest. The Committee voted to report the charter and extend the time three years, also to give the Company authority to take water from Lake Pend and tributaries.

The same Committee also voted to report another bill to allow the City of Bangor to take water from the Penobscot river in Veazie, bells for municipal purposes, subject to the action of the legal voters.

They also voted to report a bill to establish lines at Brewer.

The Constitutional Revision

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

AUGUSTA, Jan. 27. The Constitutional Commission took up the subject of municipal towns, and an active was adopted that a constitutional provision be drawn empowering the Legislature to authorize towns by two-thirds vote to loan their credit to five per cent of their valuation in aid of railroads provided said corporation reimburse said towns, principal and interest, within twenty year. It was also voted to report a provision prohibiting tribunals in elections by all franchising parties convicted of infamous crimes. By a vote of 8 to 7 it was also voted to recommend the abolition of the Executive Council.

Coming Bills

The Committee on Education voted to report a bill amending the school laws allowing the distribution of 20 per cent of school money among small districts in towns, also bills to incorporate the St. Augustine School for Boys at Topsham, to enable Bates College to give the Maine Central Institute $6000, to enable towns to abolish the district system, for compulsory education compelling scholars between 7 and 15 years to attend school a certain specified time. An adverse report will be made on State uniformity of text books.

Contested Election Case.

The House Election Committee will decide the case Reed vs Montgomery, Friday next, undoubtedly in favor of Reed, the contestant.

FROM PORTLAND.

Hot House Burned

PORTLAND, Jan. 27. One of Ramsey's hot houses, with a large number of valuable plants, was burned at Stevens' Plains, at two o'clock this morning.

Verdict Against the Eastern Railroad.

In the Supreme Court at Saco, to-day, in the case of James Hobbs administrator of Mary Hobbs, vs. Eastern Railroad Company, an action to recover for injuries to his wife by being thrown under the train in November, 1872, receiving injuries which caused her death, the jury rendered a verdict for plaintiff for $5,000.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

FORTY-THIRD CONGRESS—Second Session.

WASHINGTON, January 27.

Senate.

Numerous petitions were presented for the passage of a law, prohibiting the sale, importation or manufacture, of alcoholic liquors as a beverage, in the District of Columbia and Territories of the United States. Referred to the Finance Committee.

The Chair laid before the Senate a communication from the President transmitting the report of progress to date made by the U. S. Centennial Commission. Ordered to be printed.

Mr Dorsey introduced a bill to establish certain telegraph lines in several States and Territories, as post roads, and to regulate the transmission of commercial and other intelligence by telegraph. Referred to Post Office Committee.

Mr Morton submitted a resolution to repeal the 22d joint rule of the two houses of Congress in regard to the counting of the electoral vote ordered printed.

At the expiration of the morning hour the Senate resumed their consideration of Mr Schurz' motion in regard to Louisiana, and Mr Thurman took the floor. He said that the resolution required that the Senate should not stop at the election of 1871 in that State, but should go back to that of 1872, and he proposed to speak first of what took place at the election of 1872. He knew it was a thirless little talk, and it would therefore be very tedious, but he could not make a complete statement without going over the facts and he felt compelled to do so.

The Senate then adjourned.

House

Mr Buckner of Massachusetts, asking question of privilege, called up a motion made by him last session to refer so much of the bill to the Civil Rights bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

A point of order was raised, but the Speaker decided that the right existed and the question thereupon. Debate ensued upon the Blanchard bill.

At 2.37 the House still was in the House continued without a vote on the amendment or amendments and without any incident of important.

The House at 3.30 was still going through the interesting performance of voting by yeas and nays on military motions of various kind. No proposition has been made looking to a solution of the difficulty. The Republicans say that they will insist on the Civil Rights bill and make the question one of privilege and the Democrats say they are ready to fight it out on that line.

While the proceedings had gone on for some four hours Mr Butler of Massachusetts rose and said he had a proposition to make.

Mr Eldridge of Wisconsin, speaking for the Democrats, said they did not object to an opportunity was given to hear a proposition.

After some objections had been withdrawn Mr Butler said he would make his proposition. He did not now have occasion for hours of public time on the question of the Civil Rights bill, and he desire to say to the opposite side of the House that if the bill is allowed to be considered he will pledge all proper amendments to be offered so that the simple question is a question of the consideration of public measures leaving every man to move in amendments and to work such people as the House will listen to and leaving the bill to be considered thirty and proposition.

Mr McCrary, on behalf of the House asked for a reading of the bill on which he had prepared. Objections were made on the Democratic side to the resolution being read by the Clerk, whereupon Mr Butler said he would embody it in a part of his statement and proceed to read it. Revolution then in the House on the two houses should all and for hour, at which the bill thirty minutes allowed to the opponents of the measure and the bill whether the bill came before the House, four hours should be allowed for debate of which one-half should be given to the opponents of the bill that six minutes should be allowed to each member and no member should be allowed to speak more than twice.

Mr Randall, of Pennsylvania, replied to the proposition. He did not pledge himself for the majority and if the majority should be with the opposition, the President and Vice President would vote with a full knowledge that the candidates for the highest office in the land would be declared elected and the chances would be that the election would be thrown into the House. There is no provision in the law in case of tie that the votes shall have a majority of the votes in the State. He proposed to have a committee of the two houses to be the report to the powers of the State and in counting of the electoral vote under the 12th amendment of the Constitution.

The Centennial Committee's Report

Washington, Jan. 27. The report of the Centennial Commission shows that it was some time before it could work its way fairly before it. There is very little doubt that while some states and the Canadian and South American states and all the European and Oriental nations will send in exhibits of all kinds.

The Navy Department Building Fired by an Incendiary

Yesterday examination of the clerks of the Navy Department showed that important papers and records had been carefully selected for burning the building. In the strong room of the Department was found a large quantity of paper and rubbish, with oil and other inflammable materials, and the building of Mandy was the result of an incendiary.

Reduction of Expenditures

Small have hearings by the House Committee of the Department of Justice, Treasury and Navy, with a view to reduction of expenditures, and have hitherto shown that the greatest economy has been practised in the Department of Justice.

Financial Matters

New York, Jan. 27. The Post says it is reported that the report cannot be confirmed that the Treasury has so far extended its contract with the Rothschilds, Seligman & Sons beyond as to cover $20,000,000 of the new five-twenties and that on the 1st the Secretary will call in $20,000,000 of the five-twenties, interest on which is to cease Feb. 1.

NEBRASKA.

Fallen, Fallen, Fallen

OMAHA, Jan. 27. The thermometer has fallen 28 degrees during the past 24 hours, with indications of still colder weather.

NEW YORK CITY.

The Ice Bridge.

New York, Jan. 27th. Another ice bridge was formed on East River last night from 11 o'clock till nearly 2 this morning. A few people crossed on the ice and the Fulton, Wall st and South Ferries to Brooklyn ceased running. They resumed, however, at daylight, and although the rivers on both sides of the city are to-day completely covered with ice, the ferry boats make passages at lengthy intervals. Few vessels without steam venture into either river as they would be cut through by the ice.

An Injunction Continued.

Judge Donlds of the Supreme Court has rendered a decision continuing the temporary injunction heretofore granted restraining the Quicksilver Mining Company from issuing any new preferred stock.

Burned to Death.

Owen Gunaflan was burned to death this forenoon, while trying to save a sewing machine from his burning house. He had previously saved his wife and four children.

Mr. and Mrs. Sartoris.

Quite a number of people including Col Fred Grant and several leading politicians, welcomed Mrs Sartoris, President Grant's daughter, on her arrival here to-day. She and her husband leave for Washington to-night.

Rapid Transit Scheme.

A large meeting of business men was held to-day for the purpose of devising means of building a rapid transit road independent of State legislation. The plan adopted was to form a joint stock company of business men of this city, with shares of one thousand dollars each. One hundred thousand dollars was pledged in support of the scheme.

TENNESSEE.

What Andy Johnson Says.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27. Andy Johnson is reported as saying yesterday that "He should go to the Senate with no feeling of personal hostility to any one, but with a large affection for and more intensified devotion to the great landmarks that have been the guide of his country through every ordeal." "I have," said he, "but few years to live, and, God being my helper, the balance of my life shall be devoted to the weal and prosperity of the country which I have loved from my infancy more than life. I would rather be a Senator of Congress from Tennessee and have the endorsement of the people that he elected President of the United States. I have stood by the Constitution as President, and have tried to mete to all, both North and South, equal rights under that instrument. That was the chief end of my administration.

ARKANSAS.

Attempt to Capture the James Boys—A Child Killed and the Mother Wounded

NEW YORK, Jan. 27. An Arkansas City dispatch says a party attempted to capture the notorious James boys a short time ago. Mrs. Hildebrand and her son were standing before the door of their house in the woods and the party rode up to fire and Frank was hated grounds through the window when it exploded killed an eight-year-old child and wounding the mother and wounding twelve other persons. The boys evidently went out to fight the assailant and all retreated to the woods. But up to the third prisoner nothing is yet known as some of the parties can be found.

SENATORIAL MATTERS

The West Virginia Democrats Fail to Agree

CINCINNATI, Jan. 27. A special from Charleston, West Virginia, says the Senatorial caucus held last night was a failure. Henry C. Wilkinson, Jr., had 28 votes which was 11 short of a nomination. An adjournment will be held.

New Jersey Elects Randolph

TRENTON, Jan. 27. The two houses of the Legislature met in joint session to-day and elected R. Randolph, Dem., United States Senator, over G. M. Robeson, by a vote of 40 to 31.

Bright's Address Criticised

LONDON, Jan. 27. The Marquis of Hartington made a speech at Lewes last night. He thanked Bright and Forster at Birmingham, and said he could not agree to the views it advanced in favor of disestablishment of the Church of England. He declared that it was evident the British people were not prepared for such a thing as the Church and Government.

NEW BRUNSWICK

More Rioters Arrested

ST. JOHN, Jan. 27. A dispatch from Carraquette, Gloucester county, says that twenty-two men arrived to-day to assist the rioters who took part in the memorial meeting of Hon. Robert Young on Monday last on account of his action in referring the Government school act. Fifteen of the rioters were arrested. John Gifford one of the Sheriff's party which had execution of his duty at Andersonville, was killed. One of the rioters is reported killed and another wounded. The party in Albert's house have all been made prisoners.

FRANCE

A Flood

LONDON, Jan. 27. The Times Paris dispatch says there is a flood in the river Seine and the water still rising. It is so high that steamboats cannot pass under the bridges and have ceased running. The troops in the uniforms are covered with water to the depth of three feet.

SPAIN.

Preparing for a Movement against the Carlists.

LONDON, Jan. 27. A dispatch to the News says preparations have been made by the Spanish troops for a movement against the Carlists in the event of Alfonso's proclamation calling for submission proving ineffectual. Forty thousand troops are massed together around Tafalla for an attack upon the main Carlist position at Peña La Reyna and Cafiscula commanding road to Pamplona. Alfonso will participate in the operations of the troops.

Shot—Groceries Attacked—A Hard-Years and Small Pox.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27. Havana advices of the 21st state that a Spanish captain was shot by order of court martial, in the presence of all the forces and people of Puerto Principe. The Spanish troops attacked the groceries at Manzanillo but the merchants and volunteers defended the citizens and several were killed on both sides. The town of Mayarari was recently fired during a raid of Cubans and six volunteers were killed. Fears are entertained in Havana that the Cubans will burn all the sugar estates in Sinco Villas. The small pox is raging all over the place.

LONGING.

BY ANNA G. BRACKETT.

I would I were an emblown rose
Close shutting leaves of green—
So shut that none had ever guessed
The color hidden in its breast
By blush of pink between.

Then when your face but turned my way
As now, the crumpled sheen
Of crimson, in a space away
Would tell the livelong summer day
Within, unheard, unseen,

But, when your footsteps nearer drew,
Would burst the green apart,
And petals flowing in the sun
Would cherishe is every one
The new life at my heart.

And fully spent of all the leagues,
You passed of sea or shore,
The clasp of calyx still should hold,
For everyone, there would unfold
One velvet petal more.

So, when at last, no space between,
Your own from mine you broke,
And in your hand my perfect grace
Per chance you lifted to your face,
Although no word you spoke—

Ah, then, indeed, the petals all
Down to the dewy sweet might fall
Before you as you went,
An life, perchance, your finger feet
Might find for it on the way more sweet,
Of all I were all content.

For so meet take the one lost word
That touched my thirsty quest,
Might treasured be, changed, silver heard,
And that were treasure!

CHAPTER II.

"LAY THEM BY."

Mr. Silver, in his icy rage, strode out into the moonlight at a sharp pace, taking the direction of the lake. The scene he had just witnessed, the knowledge that had burst upon him, filled his whole soul with the intensest wrath. For years and years it had been his darling wish to see his son and niece united; not more for the sake of uniting the large fortune of the Brothers Silver, than because he so loved Violet.

He loved his son with a great love, and he coveted Violet for him. There had been another son once that he "was not," one many years older than Charles; Charles alone remained to him, and on him was concentrated all his affections. Just at this moment when success crowned his wishes, for his brother Arnold had this very self-same evening given consent to the marriage—it was maddening to find his alabaster fabric of hope dashed to the ground by the glancing wing of the bright little creature who had flitted self opportunely across his path. "Why," he said to himself, as his black shadow swiftly traversed the pearly light, bathing the emerald slope of the lawn, "I could crush her with a touch! And yet I foresee as certain as a conflict which begins with a shudder in the desert, and perhaps as hopeless! Charles, too! But I don't blame him. She has bewitched him! I wish she had never come here!"

A grim smile darkened rather than brightened his majestic face, and he closed his eyes upon the fine curves of the resolute mouth, lost in our dear bar, as unyielding as death itself. Onward he strode, his step fleeter and more fierce.

"Daisy Leighton must be got rid of," he mutted slowly. "I have never yet taken life of my will yet to mortal, and it would be strange indeed if the telly of a boy and girl should turn me aside from the purpose of my life—that of joining the house and fortune of my brother with my own. Yes! I must disclose to Arnold what I have discovered, and get him to deport some other home for her."

He marched path led him through the grove of willows to the border of the lake. It was dark under here, the trees hid the moon. Mr. Silver was no longer angry. He had taken his rage by the throat and planted his foot upon it, after the fashion he had followed with fierce results in his busy life. He was even a little amused with himself for his brief passion. "One would almost imagine it a thing of consequence," he said to himself, "the poor young simpletons! It is only boy and girl fancy."

Passing into the screen of drooping willow boughs he was about to step downward to the little pebbly, glistening with the golden sand under the moonbeams, when, as though sunning in another dress back into the impenetrable shade of the willow-trees, from which his fierce gleaned as though he had in every. All his fierce anger had gathered again, it utterly nearly paralyzing him. But for this he would inadvertently revealed himself, his haughty spirit spurned the idea of spying on the actions of others.

A sight he trembled on the edge of the water lower down, partially shaded by the overhanging willow branches. In it stood a man, young and handsome, as it seemed to him—a man with a black beard and mustache, which was contrasted out from the shore. Mr. Silver looked, it freed itself from the tiny leaves, and tossed on the long, purple, velvet shoots of the lake. The man turned his dark handsome face his listeners eyes to the shore.

"Goodby, lass, goodby," he said in a low and cautious voice, and with cold and kissed both his hands to him, her deep eyes radiant her rose lips quivering and smiling. It was Violet Silver!

"Au revoir, not goodby," she whispered.

She turned and fled quickly toward the house, her golden tide and long white dress drifting out behind her like vapor. And the man, with a long, powerful stroke of his oar, swept along under the bank, and turned in the sharp curve there, was lost to sight.

Aurelius Silver drew a heavy breath, which alone seemed to ease the muscles of his vast chest. A complexion that art could wish, to one glance, his one could hardly fail to read his moods, unless indeed his actions was prompt, vigorous, and inspiring. And of all men who ever bore the golden prize from the hand of fortune, Aurelius Silver knew how to be inspiring to others and to himself. He had rarely done a generous deed that he had never done a dishonorable one. Some natures resemble masses of grim rock threaded with veins of gold, but to the cold walls of which no tender parable clings, no vine of fancy connects them with the warmth and sunshine of human life. Mr. Silver neither gave nor expected sympathy. He had his virtues, but they were of the high Roman sort. He was honorable, he was temperate, he was courageous. The hidden fire which, lurks in man, as in nature, was there, but it neither brightened his life nor that of others.

"So!" he said, with a deep breath, "Violet!"

The expression of his face boded but little good toward the girl. She was the only creature he had permitted himself to love. Charles excepted, and for the very reason that she was dear to him, he absolutely hated her in this moment when he found her young spirit had freed itself from the shackles of his will.

Turning to the left, he walked along the edge of the bank. The strip of beach below dwindled to a mere golden thread. The lake was very deep just here. Aurelius Silver glanced back at his brother's house. Against the lighted in the drawing-rooms beyond the rose garden, the fountain threw up its diamond spray; and against it again, a little black form seemed to be rushing down frantically like a phantom. It was Daisy Leighton. She was coming toward where Mr. Silver stood; and all his dreadful anger was again roused as he recognized her.

It all passed in a moment. Whether the girl could not stop herself in time, whether her foot slipped at the bank's edge, or whether in her uncontrollable passion she flung herself forward could not be told; but there she was, in the lake below, just beneath Aurelius Silver.

One wild cry, one glimpse of her ghastly little face and flashing eyes; one short, sharp struggle with the treacherous water; and then all was still as before, save that widening rings of silver chased each other out across the lake, and drove its waters lapping in sudden life over the halt of sand.

A mighty shudder ran through the vast frame of Aurelius Silver. He was a strong swimmer; what aided him that he made no effort to save the distraught from the grave she had fallen into? In that moment, a demon spoke to his soul. "Oh, man, why trouble thyself? Fate has crushed this one obstacle out of thy path. Make her evil thy good."

Was there a despairing voice abroad, sighing through the pines, and across the purple, silver-crested swells of the lake, sighing over the sudden fall of him who had walked well among men from the high throne of his boasted honor? Were the stars changed to orbs of fire and blood, as his burning eyes turned towards them?

With his silver hair lifting itself from his head, with a hand of fire grasping his heart, with his eyes that saw and ears that heard not, Aurelius Silver turned away from the lake.

CHAPTER III.

"LORD, KEEP MY MEMORY GREEN!"

An old stone house standing outside a town at least a hundred miles away from the beautiful Summer villa of Arnold Silver. A house standing back from the highway and flanked with great trees, and weird-looking as those in Gustave Doré's picture of the "Hewing of the Cedars for the Temple." The mansion itself lay square, massive, low-browed; its walls were of granite, with that faint suggestion of rose and aqua-marine flowing through the stone which renders some of these old buildings so mellow and picturesque. The windows were small and formal, the chimneys standing up against the sky, corbled and hooded like hermits on a mountain top, and from the great eaves, giant lances of diamond, the handiwork of the fairy armorer of King Frost, were hanging like the spears of Titans in some enchanted land. A carriage drive swept round from the great gated dark sombre bronze to the stone step, guarded on either side by a stone lion rampant, of an amiable, not to say benevolent aspect. A hall door of polished oak stood hospitably open in the Winter's sun.

This was the home of the elder brother, Aurelius Silver. It was the custom of the two families to spend the Winter together here, and the Summer at the villa of the younger, Arnold.

But they had quitted the villa earlier than usual this year. There was a certain night in August that had struck its fantastic with perplexity, if not terror. Margaret Leighton—or Daisy, as they fondly called her—had disappeared. After a quarrel with Charles—he had confessed to that—she tore from him in a little tempest of fury. Only to the garden, as he supposed, to cool herself by the fountain, or amid the roses, but she had never come back again. From that mysterious hour she had disappeared. Charles and Violet had remained together in the drawing room talking, and waiting for her to make her appearance, how long they scarcely knew. But she did not come. Mr. Arnold Silver had gone to the twilight from the dinner table that night, not being well. Mr. Silver (Aurelius) had chanced to take a long contemplative walk that night, the night was so fine that it tempted him; he told them when he came in—and that was not until long upon midnight. Where was Daisy, they asked him—for Charles and Violet had taken up the notion that the two absent ones must be strolling about together. Daisy, report of Mr. Silver, at the question—what should he know about Daisy? But that he caught the same startled in regard to her, with evident, for his face turned strangely pale.

Well, from that hour no trace of Daisy had been found. The family and the servants were searching about all night, Charles in a distracted state, but they did not find her. They never had found her. What her fate has could not be conjectured with any certainty, some thought she had run away, others, case due fears toward the lake. Aurelius Silver never enlightened them, nor told a tint of the grave secret the lake might have disclosed.

And when all search was abandoned as hopeless, they had quitted the villa, which seemed so sacred full of disquiet, for the distant Winter mansion. And the week had gone on, and it was Christmas Eve. Little more had been said about the union of the two cousins, even Mr. Silver no longer pressed it.

In the dining-room of this the old house sat Violet Silver, making wreaths of holly and ivy.

Violet sighed as she worked. The girl's face was changed in some subtle way since that night we saw her by the fountain. A shade more pensive, a thought less radiant, the eyes deeper in expression, the lips parting less readily in laughter and speech; such was the change. The same change, but intensified a hundred-fold, was reported in Charlie Silver's countenance. He sat near her, watching in silence her long, gypsy fingers as they twined the emerald sprays into a long, clustering wreath, decked here and there with the fire of scarlet berries, day from beneath the white drifts of the woods.

His face was decidedly changed. The features were sharper, the glance of the eye deeper, the line of the mouth and chin more resolute and decided. The fair curls had lost their Violet's, and developed more into a resemblance to Aurelius Silver. Yet, with this change, though, retaining what was finest and boldest in the elder face, softening the cold and commanding expression which gleamed coldly in its large and stern eyes.

There were lines in Charlie's broad brow, four months previously he had hardly looked 18 years; now he looked to be twenty-one.

"Charlie, how pale you are!" said Violet, breaking a long pause. "Hand me some more sprays of holly please. There, how do you like my wreath?"

"Very well," said Charlie, listlessly, observing the manicate. "What a pretty idyl of Christmas Eve you make, Violet," he added looking at her. "You have a gracious beauty who to you, such as the "Spirit of the day should Love."

"Thanks! I like compliments," said Violet, very sincerely. "You are so generous, indeed, as I am Charles, and this wreath is destined to frame our great-grandmother yonder. How droll she looks in that powdered wig and brocaded dress, simpering at her wooly rock. What flourishing blocks of Arcadia those dear old people must have lived in!"

The wreath was finished. Charles Silver rose, and for some steps and mounting to fasten the wreath round the massive old frame of the portrait, which hung over the carved mantle-piece. Violet drew by to watch him. There was an unusual paleness in both of them to-day, for they were about to separate. She resumed her seat, and began another wreath.

"I always detest the perfume of this withering wood," she exclaimed impatiently, as Charles came back to his chair. "Do you know, if Uncle Aurelius hadn't developed an extraordinary enthusiasm for Christmas decorations, I should not have had the heart to undertake them this year."

"I can imagine that," said Charles, quietly.

"You going away is the worst of all, Charles."

"It is very pleasant to know that I shall come to think kindly and lovingly of one who I am away," he observed. "I can quite understand that quaint old prayer, 'Long, long may memory green!'"

"Oh, Charlie!" said Violet, with startled eyes, "you speak as if you never meant to return! Surely you are not going from us with the idea in your mind—"

"Think of your father."

"Think of yourself, you mean, Violet," he answered, sadly. "I cannot control fate, child. An impression seems to fix on my mind that I may never return."

"Why, why, oh! why do you go?"

"I must go, Violet; I cannot rest here. Every hour I am reminded of her. There's nothing for me but change. Heaven above knows how I loved her, and what her strangeness has been to me!"

"Violet's hot tears fell on the wreath. But she dashed them away with her hand, and looked at him hopefully.

"Time," he said, will bring its cure. You are so very young, Charlie!"

"Not too young to keep my memory green!" he said, repeating his words softly. "In time, in time, I may come back again, dear. You will be happy with them, with children about your knees."

He rose as he spoke and left the room, wishing her good-by until dinner-time. She worked on until her wreath were finished, and then sent up to her chamber carrying some sprays of holly with her that her maid was to dispose of on her white dinner dress.

But Violet was very restless. She knew why. A task, which she had undertaken, was to be performed that evening; and she knew not whether it would turn out for good or for ill.

"I had thought to have Daisy with me this Christmas," she sighed softly to herself. "Oh, what has become of her? Is she in death or in life?"

Her thoughts were becoming painful. Quitting her chamber, she went down stairs again. The great square hall had its Christmas decorations of green wreaths and holly-berries, and was flooded with the crimson firelight from its wide hearth. Violet drew back into the shade to admire the effect of the decorations, which had been done by the servants.

Suddenly the house was startled by a shriek, and a cry, and a fall. Servants and others rushed into the hall where it came, and there found Violet. She lay on the floor, like an image of snow, perfectly unconscious, a look of intensest horror frozen on her lovely face.

"I never knew her to faint before," said Arnold Silver, quaking in every limb, as Aurelius lifted her from the ground and carried her into the dining-room. "My darling! what can have happened?"

"Nothing," said Aurelius, quietly. "Because she never has fainted, there is no reason why she should now do so. Violet has not scared herself of late."

He laid her very tenderly and gently on a couch, touching her cheek caressingly with his fingers as he did so.

"She is reviving," he said quietly.—"Stand back, Arnold. Give her air."

"My precious one, what was it?" questioned her father. "Were you alarmed at anything?"

"Oh! father, I don't know what it was," wailed Violet. "—I think I must have fallen into a dream. If you will take me up to my room I'll lie down till dinner-time."

Arnold Silver took her, and charged her maid not to leave the chamber.

Other year of the Marvellous Solar tide results of the application of the principles of

BIOMETRY,

Or the Measure of Life.

What is That?

It is the science and art of predicting the probable length of life of a person—deducing it from his Ancestry, Constitution (the measure in size, form, color, and function of its various parts, being the signs and Education), Habits, Occupation, Residence, Intelligence, Instincts, Health, Age, and whatever else, if else there be, which can affect the potentialities of life.

By the application of this science, Life Risks are graded and rated as in Fire and Marine Insurance, and thus, and only thus, can

EQUITY TO ALL CLASSES,

AND THE

Lowest Cost of Premiums

TO THE

BEST GRADES,

With the perfect security afforded by

Lowest Cost. Perfect Security.

TERM-LIFE (LABOR-TERM) INSURANCE,

"NATURAL-PREMIUMS."

What is That?

It is adopted to secure to a family, in case of the decease of the bread winner during the period of his yearly wealth of that labor.

"Natural Premium" is the true plan of "pay the yearly cost," or "pay as you go," and put nothing into a company which, both in the amount of cost and security, may better be kept by the assured.

The TWO SCIENTIFIC INVENTIONS here are specifically applicable only by the AMERICAN POPULAR LIFE-INSURANCE COMPANY.

The idea of GRADING AND RATING Life Risks cannot be applied by any other company already started, since, if it should adopt the method of grading, the best risks now insured in it would of course drop their present policies to take out better ones, to wit, at the lower premiums to which they are entitled, but the inferior risks would stay, and pay the premiums so much less than they ought to be for them.

The Plan of Term Life "Natural Premium" is not applied by the other companies, because, as they say, they would not, on their "average" plan of taking all insured persons at the same premiums, get enough to cover the expense of their numerous losses.

Hence, all other companies "make facts" at the American Popular, and "call names," about which it does not care a fig, if it can only, as it does, secure the approbation of the scientific and thoughtful, and the patronage of the probably long lived.

LETTER CARRIERS

Letters are delivered free by carriers within a mile and a half of the Post Office, and those who live in the vicinity of the Post Office can have their letters sent, but it is much more convenient to have the street and number on, and they will be delivered earlier if the same is put on at the office. Carriers make deliveries daily, the second trip supplying the boxes of their routes.

Collections are made morning and evening in our business portion, the town is divided into four routes, and a carrier is assigned to each route. Letters for mailing will be taken at the office.

Sundays and holidays the Carrier's Window will be open for the delivery of letters from 11 to 9½ A. M., and from 4 to 5 P. M.

Any irregularity on the part of Carriers should be reported to the office.

ENVELOPES.

An additional charge will be made for printing name and request to return, upon the corner of the envelope, furnished by the Office Department. Envelopes of a quality not seen at the Cashier's window, will be charged at the rate of less than 50.

A request for the return of a letter to the writer, if undelivered within thirty days, may be printed, with the writer's name, post office and State, across the left end of the envelope, or the face thereof, with the complete address.

A request for the return of a letter to the writer, if undelivered within thirty days, may be printed on the envelope, or the face thereof, with the writer's name, post office and State, across the left end of the envelope, or the face thereof, with the complete address.

Stamped envelopes will be recommended to persons desiring to use them for returning letters, if not delivered to the person addressed, are returned to the writer free of charge.

Blank envelopes of above furnished at $3 80 per thousand.

News of This Section and the State.

In politics the paper will continue to adhere to and uphold the principles of the Republican party, while claiming to be independent in the highest and best sense of the word. While fearless and outspoken in its treatment of all public questions and firmly maintaining what it believes to be right, it will avoid bitterness and make its appeals to the understanding rather than to prejudice. The year about to open will be fruitful of political events of important bearing upon the future of the country, and it will be our aim to keep our readers thoroughly informed, and to favor such measures and men as we shall deem best calculated to promote the welfare of the people. The great objects to
